Route: Schleching (569 m) - Mühlau hiking car park - Dalsen forest trail, Vordere Dalsen Alm (946 m) - Hintere Dalsen Alm - Schattseit trail - Mühlau - Schleching

The "Floderermandl" is a "horrible ghost" that scares the shit out of children. But of course only in the legend. On the other hand, the waterfall called «Floderer», home of the legendary Floderermandl, is 100% real. You can pass the 50 meter high waterfall after a few minutes on the easy round trip to the Dalsen Almen. It starts either directly at the Tourist Info in Schleching or at the Dalsen car park in Mühlau. There is also parking at Dalsenbach. After a quarter of an hour you will pass the «Ochsensprung», the first large waterfall, and a little later the «Floderer». You continue uphill and reach the magnificent Dalsen Alm with the Vordere and Hintere Dalsen Alm. Dalsen is a Roman name for mountain saddle. After the typical alpine snack at the "Huber-Kaser" you can still cycle in a few minutes to a cross with benches that can be seen from afar before heading home. Either you take the same way back or you drive south of the Dalsenbach on the so-called "Schattseit-Weg" in a rushing ride down to Mühlau.

Highlights : waterfalls along the way, two alpine pastures, beautiful viewing bench at the cross (short detour)
